GAS EXHIBITION, 1851.—The great and increasing importance of the gas interest, in which so much capital is invested, demands that any improvements or adaptations of the gas to which gas can be applied should be placed before the public in that form in which they are alone calculated to attract attention—that is, in actual operation. This not being permitted at the National Exposition, the Committee of the Gas-Fitters Association has been induced to make arrangements with the Directors of the Royal Polytechnic Institution for the setting apart of an important portion of that establishment for six months (from May to November), for the EXHIBITION and ILLUSTRATION of APPARATUS embracing any novel or useful application of GAS for culinary, heating, chymical, or manufacturing purposes; improvements in burners, arrangements for lighting, ventilation, governors, and meters, each to be shown in actual operation, illustrated and explained daily by competent persons engaged for that purpose.

The Committee call upon all Gas Companies, metropolitan and provincial, their respective shareholders, as well as coal-owners, gas apparatus manufacturers, and others interested in creating a more extended demand for gas, to assist them in efficiently carrying forward this movement to a successful issue, by contributing towards the necessary expenses, and also giving their aid by causing to be sent to the various departments of machinery from their respective districts of any apparatus tending to the improved production, distribution, or application of gas; and it is intended to give medals in gold and silver to exhibitors of articles of the greatest public utility.

The Polytechnic Institution will be open to receive apparatus, &c. available from April 1st to 31st, both inclusive. Subscriptions may be paid to the account of the Association Exhibition Fund, at the London and Westminster Bank, 1, St. James's-square; or to the Chairman, Mr. George Bethridge, 23, Gerrard-street, Soho, to whom all communications are to be addressed, and who will furnish any further information that may be required.
